List of United States Universities - - - - -	34

INTRODUCTION.

A FEW years ago I published a little book containing, among other things, a list of the Degrees and Hoods of all the British and a few of the Colonial Universities and Colleges. From time to time I have received a large number of letters from Graduates of Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, Durham, &c., with suggestions as to the extending of this list to all the principal Colonial and American Universities. I also received unsolicited communications from Canada, the United States, and Australia, offering to supply information, in case I proposed to include at any time the Universities and Colleges in those distant parts, in any such extension. Being thus encouraged, I undertook the somewhat formidable task of corresponding with the principal Universities among the English-speaking people throughout the world. A considerable time necessarily elapsed before I could receive replies from all of them, especially from the distant Colonies; but having now procured the information I sought, I am able to offer in the following pages that which many correspondents have asked me for, and which I believe is not obtainable from any other source.

And here I wish to express my best thanks to those gentlemen in America, India, Australia, New Zealand, and the Cape who have kindly sent me information, and more especially to those who have volunteered to help me.

In many cases copies of University Calendars, or "Catalogues," as they are called in the United States, have been forwarded to me. These vary considerably in the amount and kind of information which they contain. Some are large volumes like the well-known Calendars of our own Universities, whilst others are but mere pamphlets stitched in paper covers. The course of instruction and examination at most of the Colonial Universities has been modelled upon the system employed at one or other of the Universities in the mother country, some following very closely Oxford and Cambridge, others London, and one or two the Scottish Universities. The Colonial Universities differ very much in size and importance. Some are large and flourishing seats of learning, whilst others seem to be but small Colleges, almost struggling for existence. In some cases the Degrees have only a local value, but in others the Queen has granted a Royal Charter, by which the position of the Graduates has been secured, and their Degrees recognized throughout the British Empire.

The United States Universities are exceedingly numerous. They derive their Degree-giving power from the Legislature of the State in which they are situated. Academical costume has hitherto not been adopted but by a few American Universities, and these are mostly connected with the Episcopal Church. There is a tendency, however, to introduce Gowns and Hoods for the use of Graduates. The value of a Degree from the United States depends upon the rank and position of the College which conferred it. It should be distinctly stated that no Degrees are sold by any College, however small and insignificant, as is sometimes thought to be the case in England, where the American University system is but little understood. It is true that spurious Degrees were sold a few years ago by an agent in England, which apparently were conferred by a regular chartered University; and indeed it seems that the institution in question had actually procured a charter as a new kind of Medical College. But as soon as it was known that it had commenced to carry on a Degree trade, the proceedings were at once stopped by the withdrawal of the charter, and the enterprising head of this "University" was last heard of in one of the State prisons, busily employed in another kind of occupation. It seems, however, that but few persons in England were duped, and these were chiefly non-qualified medical men, who purchased M.D.'s, and private schoolmasters, who invested ten guineas in an M.A., or perhaps ventured fifteen for a LL.D.

The Hoods, or Tippets, of the Theological Colleges in England have from time to time been discussed in print, and particularly lately in a leading Church newspaper. A great deal has been said, and may still be said, on both sides, for them and against them. The 58th Canon states: "Such Ministers as are Graduates shall wear upon their Surplices such Hoods as, by the orders of the Universities, are agreeable to their Degrees, which no Minister shall wear (being no Graduate) under pain of suspension. Notwithstanding, it shall be lawful for such Ministers as are not Graduates to wear upon their Surplices, instead of Hoods, some decent Tippet of black, so it be not silk." On the one hand, some argue that this Canon permits only Graduates to wear any kind of a Hood over their Surplices, and restricts all non-Graduates alike to a plain stuff black Tippet. But it is replied that the Canon was framed before Theological Colleges were contemplated, and therefore it cannot apply to these recognized institutions for training Candidates for Holy Orders. Besides, it has been said that a distinguishing mark, even a coloured lining to the "decent Tippet of black," is no infringement of the Canon. On these grounds some of the Theological Colleges have for years adopted a coloured lining or edging to their Hoods, in more than one case with the express permission of the Archbishop of Canterbury at the time it was introduced. The Upper House of Convocation of the Province of Canterbury has recently tried to settle the matter by declaring that each Theological College may have a coloured border or edging on a black Hood not of silk. Some of the Theological Colleges have adopted this plan, but it does not seem as if it would become general, for those who have previously possessed a lining are not likely to relinquish it for a narrow border. If I may venture to make a suggestion, in addition to the many which have been already made by others, I would say that the most satisfactory plan to settle this question would be for one kind of Hood only to be granted to the certificated Students of all Theological Colleges alike, as they all pass through a similar course of instruction and examination, irrespective of the locality in which the College happens to be situated. Graduates could then no longer feel aggrieved at the multiplication of Theological Hoods, some of which, it is alleged, resemble their own; for the Theological Hood, easily recognized, would be an evident and well-known mark that the wearer had received special training for his work, though not at a University—whether at St. Bees or Chichester, St. Aiden's or Lincoln, would be immaterial. If I may further make a suggestion, I would add that the colour of the lining of such a general Theological Hood might be some shade of violet, as this colour is already adopted by three or four Colleges, and it does not denote any British University Degree of which the holder is likely to be in Holy Orders. Confusion on this ground could not therefore possibly arise. Such a Hood would give in some respects the same indication of the wearer as the Graduates' Hoods do. Take, for instance, the well-known crimson lining to a black silk Hood. It indicates that the wearer is probably an M.A. of the University of Oxford, and that is all that can be gathered from it. It does not show to what College he belonged, if any, nor if he took honours, or only passed his examination, after repeated failures. The Graduates' Hood with white fur is even more vague, for not only does it indicate none of the particulars mentioned above, but it takes an expert to be able to say to what University it belongs. It may be Oxford, Cambridge, or Durham, an Irish University, or even a Colonial. The possession of one recognized Hood for all Theological Colleges alike would very much strengthen the position of the large body of Clergymen of the Church of England who are now educated at these institutions; but as long as each College has a Hood of its own, their position is weakened, and confusion is the result. To show that this is the case, I may give my own experience in collecting the information contained in the following pages. I have endeavoured to give a list of the Hoods now worn by the Students of the different Theological Colleges which have adopted a Hood; but in any case where they may prove to be not quite correct, I must beg to be excused from taking the responsibility of the mistake, in consequence of the vague and uncertain answers to my enquiries. In two cases I was referred to the robe-makers, as the authorities at the Colleges could give me no information as to what was the proper colour of the lining; in one case two colours were mentioned, "grey or brown;" in another case I was corrected for calling them Hoods; whilst the head of a College, whose Students have long distinguished themselves with a coloured lining, repudiated altogether the connection between his College and the Hood. I mention these facts only to show that it is most desirable that a recognized Hood should be granted to the Theological Colleges, about which there could be no misunderstanding on the part of the College authorities, the Students, or the public.

Lambeth Degrees.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is empowered to confer these Degrees at his discretion. For the Degree of M.A. the late Archbishop (Dr. Tait) instituted an examination; but Degrees in Theology, Law, Medicine, and Music are occasionally conferred without examination as honorary distinctions on persons eminent in these several faculties.* The Degrees usually conferred are:—

In Arts	Master	M.A.
In Divinity	Bachelor	B.D.
„	Doctor	D.D.
In Laws	Doctor	LL.D.
In Medicine	Doctor	M.D.
In Music	Doctor	Mus.D.

By long-established custom the Gowns and Hoods for Lambeth Degrees are the same as those worn for the same Degrees at the University to which the Archbishop belonged who conferred the Degree, in case the person on whom the Degree was conferred had no University Degree. When the recipient is a University man, he would wear the Gown and Hood of his own University. For instance, if the late Archbishop conferred the Degree of D.D. on a non-University man, he would wear the robes of an Oxford D.D.; but if he conferred the Degree on a Cambridge M.A., the recipient would wear the robes for the corresponding Degree of his own University.

* By the death of Archbishop Tait, whilst these pages are passing through the press, the regulations relating to the conferring of these Degrees are in abeyance.

COLONIAL UNIVERSITIES.

King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia.

Founded 1802.

The Royal Charter granted to this University by George III. states that "The Academical Habits shall be the same with those which are now in the University of Oxford, consisting of Caps, Gowns, Hoods, and Bands, as they are appropriated to each Degree, Faculty, standing, station, or situation respectively." The Degrees conferred at present are—

In Arts...	...	...	...	B.A. and M.A.
In Divinity	...	...	...	B.D. and D.D.
In Civil Law...	...	...	...	B.C.L. and D.C.L.

University of New Brunswick, Fredericton.

Founded 1828.

The Statutes of the University of New Brunswick state that "The Academical Habits shall be the same as those worn in the University of Oxford, as they are appropriated to each Degree, Faculty, rank, station, situation, or standing respectively." The Degrees conferred by this University are—

In Arts...	..	...	...	B.A. and M.A.
